Foreign Spy Ring Seeks U. S. Atom Bomb Secrets

ACTIVITY NOTED AT TENNESSEE ARMY PROJECT

Justice Department Seeks Stiffer Penalties For Security Violations

WASHINGTON, March 7—Chairman John S. Wood, D., Ga., indicated today that his House Un-American Activities committee has uncovered a foreign spy ring seeking information on the atom bomb plant at Oak Ridge, Tenn.

He told reporters the committee had been interested in the Oak Ridge project for some time and had been conducting secret investigation of its security.

Spying Evidence Found

"We have gone far enough in our investigation to show," he said, "that there are elements in this country who are decidedly seeking information that our military authorities have not authorized to be given out."

He said, "there might be some Americans involved but the investigation so far points to foreign nations."

Wood refused to amplify his statement except to say the foreign agents "knew what was going on at Oak Ridge."

Wood was understood to be seeking a conference with Director J. Edgar Hoover of the Federal Bureau of Investigation. Committee sources said Wood and committee investigators also have been in touch with War Department officials in charge of the bomb's security.

Tougher Statutes Sought

The Justice Department, meanwhile, informed the Senate Atomic Committee that tougher federal statutes were necessary to protect atom bomb secrets from foreign spys. In a report to the committee, it said that espionage on a wide-scale was possible in this country under present laws.

It urged the enactment of legislation which would impose maximum penalties of $300,000 fine and 30 years imprisonment on anyone divulging atomic information. Under its proposals, violators of the security regulations would also be liable to a fine of $100,000 and five years imprisonment.

Bill Being Studied

Members of the Senate Committee are now studying a revised version of the bill by Chairman Brien McMahon, D., Conn., to govern the security of the atom bomb.

The revisions, drawn by McMahon to meet some objections to his proposal, were not made public, but one member said they "fell far short" of meeting committee demands. The member said that although the new version provides for representation of the Secretaries of War, Navy and State on the proposed control commission, no representation of "real military men" is provided.

McMahon has opposed inclusion of military and naval officers on the commission, but his position has been criticized by Secretary of War Robert P. Patterson and Maj. Gen. Leslie R. Groves, chief of the Army atomic project.

PEACE SOUGHT IN INDO-CHINA

French Meet Opposition As They Try To Land Troops Near Haiphong

PARIS, March 7—The French government announced today that military leaders in Indo-China are trying to settle the dispute over occupation of northern Indo-China which resulted yesterday in a ship-to-shore gun duel between French and Chinese forces.

A French communique said that French warships trying to disembark occupation troops at Haiphong, chief port of northern Indo-China, were brought under "very violent" fire from Chinese shore batteries.

After 30 minutes, the communique said, the French ships returned the fire.

(A Chinese news agency dispatch from Hanoi said the French warships caused 12 casualties among the Chinese garrison. It did not mention Chinese fire on the French.)

Discussions between French and Chinese commanders were in progress today, the communique said. The discussions were intended to settle the terms under which French troops will replace Chinese troops in the northern half of Indo-China, north of the 16th parallel.

ACTING AWARDS GO TO MILLAND, INGRID BERGMAN

HOLLYWOOD, March 7—Ray Milland and Ingrid Bergman today held the Hollywood foreign correspondents association's awards for the best acting of 1945.

The foreign press named Angela Lansbury and J. Carrol Naish as giving the best supporting performances and voted a special award to "The House I Live In" for promoting international relationships.

GEN. MARSHALL PLANNING TRIP TO MANCHURIA

CHUNGKING, March 7—The Newspaper Ta Kung Pao said today that Gen. George C. Marshall, special U. S. Envoy to China, planned to visit Manchuria and that arrangements were being made with the Russians to facilitate the trip.

Pauley Probers Demand Originals Of Ickes' Notes About Oil Deal Proposal

WASHINGTON, March 7—The Senate Naval Affairs Committee ordered Harold L. Ickes to unlock his safety deposit box today and produce original memoranda he wrote about Edwin W. Pauley.

The former Interior Secretary's memoranda allegedly charged that Pauley, now nominated to be Undersecretary of the Navy, used improper methods to solicit Democratic campaign contributions while he was party treasurer.

Copies Already Read

Ickes already has read to the committee what he described as copies of the notes. One related that Pauley in September, 1944, offered to raise $300,000 in campaign contributions from California oil men if the government would not file suit for title to Tidelands.

Sen. Millard E. Tydings, D., Md., said, however, that he wanted to see the originals. Tydings, leading the defense for Pauley at committee hearings, questioned Ickes closely about the preparation of the memoranda and the copies—and indicated he would challenge their authenticity if he could find any grounds for doing so.

Pauley photostated the copies before Ickes made clear that they were not the originals.

Cross Examination Caustic

Tydings began Pauley's defense with a caustic cross-examination of Ickes. Pauley himself expected to take the witness stand tomorrow. He may call for testimony from Chairman Robert F. Hennegan of the Democratic National Committee and Price Administrator Paul Porter.

They were at a meeting with Pauley, Ickes and Undersecretary of the Interior Abe Fortas on Sept. 6, 1944. It was after this session, Ickes said, that Pauley made the $300,000 campaign offer on an "if" basis—the "rawest proposition I ever received."

Pauley said he felt this was about the only charge that he still had to answer. He contended that witnesses testifying against him had so contradicted themselves that they had "annihilated" each other.

Pauley Backers Optimistic

Senators supporting Pauley appeared more optimistic than at any other time during the hearings, which today went into their sixth week. Tydings said that Ickes' statements under cross-examination were "damned helpful to Pauley."

He noted that Ickes said Pauley might be qualified for another government job although he was—Ickes said—unfit for the Navy post.

Tydings roughed up Ickes with barbed questioned until the pugnacious ex-cabinet member protested that he was being subjected to "a low order of police court cross-examination." Then Tydings and Ickes each shouted that he wouldn't be bomboozled.

Tydings, seeking to discredit Ickes' testimony, introduced a letter showing that Ickes on Dec. 22, 1941, praised Pauley as being "capable and honest." This was upon Pauley's appointment to the Democratic party post.

Ickes Evades Question

Tydings demanded to know how Ickes reconciled that with his other statements that Pauley's character disqualified him for the Navy job.

"But I sometimes congratulate people on being married when . . ." replied Ickes.

Tydings brought out that despite his letter of congratulations

PAPEN REVEALS PEACE FEELERS

Made Secret Overtures To U. S. Naval Attache In Turkey In 1942

NUERNBERG, March 7—(UP)—Baron Franz von Papen told the War Crimes Tribunal today that he made secret peace feelers in 1942 to George Earle, American naval attache in Turkey, in violation of Adolf Hitler's orders.

Papen also claimed in a brief filed with the court that he made a second peace attempt in 1942, seeking mediation efforts through the Vatican.

Earle, former governor of Pennsylvania and later American minister to Sofia, was attached to the American embassy in Turkey while Papen was Germany's wartime ambassador to that country.

Papen asked permission to call in corroboration of his statements Kurt Freihern von Lersner, German president of the Orient League in Ankara when Papen was ambassador.

Papen claimed also that in 1942 he arranged for Lersner to visit the Vatican and seek mediation efforts by Cardinal Maglione, then Papel Secretary of State, and Bishop Montini.

IRAN'S PREMIER LEAVES RUSSIA IN GREAT STATE

MOSCOW, March 7—Premier Ahmed Ghavam of Iran took off for Tehran today to report to his government and parliament on his long negotiations with Premier Stalin and Foreign Commissar V. M. Molotov.

Ghavam and his party were given a ceremonious sendoff by the Russians. Molotov and other ranking members of the government saw them off, as did representatives of the American and British embassies.

The Iranians were given a military honor guard for the formalities of their departure.

Nothing was made public regarding the Soviet-Iranian discussions here, which were held against a backdrop of the passing of the treaty deadline for withdrawal of foreign troops from Iran.

Savannah In Festive Garb To Greet World Bankers

SAVANNAH, Ga., March 7—This proud old city today donned festive garb to welcome bank and stabilization fund representatives. A round of entertainment never before equalled was planned.

Following their arrival tomorrow morning, the governors of the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development will hold a brief session. The real work will start Monday.

Finishing touches on alterations to the $2,000,000 Luxury Hotel the General Oglethorpe, scene of the conference sessions, were being made to meet rigid specifications of the state department.

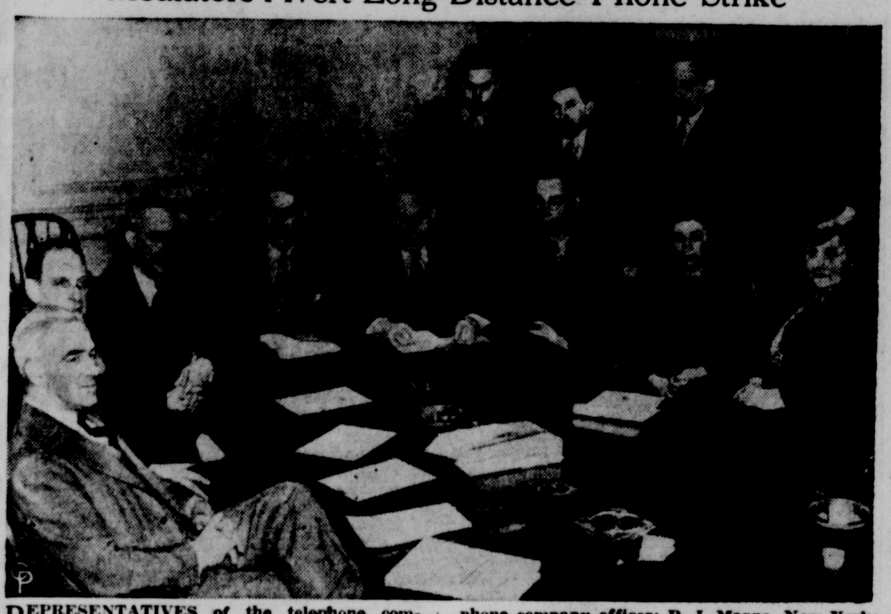

This 213-year-old city has taken on a carnival appearance, with bunting and flags overhanging the principal thoroughfares.

Secretary of Treasury Fred M. Vinson, U. S. governor of the bank and fund, will head the list of the arrivals. With him will be Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace, a member of the National Advisory Council.

Charles G. Day, general manager of the three conference hotels, said distillery firms had given him sharply increased supplies of liquor to meet the demand for cocktail parties. First party of importance will be given in honor of the delegates by the U. S. state department, acting as host for the conference.

Day said he had ordered more than 10 tons of meat which would be consumed by the delegates during their two week's stay.

Congress Leaders Fear Effect Of Churchill Talk

WASHINGTON, March 7—Influential congressional leaders seriously questioned today whether Winston Churchill's bare-knuckled attack on Russian policy has helped efforts to erase suspicion among the big powers.

Some frankly felt it had a contrary effect—that his proposal for an Anglo-American alliance for instance, may give Russia a strong argument for surrounding herself with buffer states.

Firm Policy Endorsed

They firmly endorsed this government's new policy of dealing firmly with the Soviet ally. And they hoped that Britain would take a similar course independently.

But they didn't like the fact that a Briton chose to deliver his stinging rebuke on American soil and under American auspices as personified by President Truman's presence at the speech-making.

"I don't see how we can inspire Russian confidence and erase her suspicion on the English-speaking bloc on that basis," commented one influential congressional leader.

"Speaking bluntly and firmly and frankly to Russia is one thing and something she can understand. But ganging up on her is something else. I hope that it isn't overdone."

Congressional leaders said they would follow with increased interest other speeches which Churchill has scheduled during his visit to the United States.

At Richmond Friday

The British Conservative leader is scheduled to address the Virginia state legislature at Richmond tomorrow morning. He makes a luncheon talk to the overseas writers in Washington next Monday.

He has scheduled two speeches in New York, March 15 and March 18.

Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower will accompany him on the Virginia tour. Churchill will return to Washington Saturday and leave for New York Monday. He sails for England March 21.

AIR BASE FIGHT LINKED TO LOAN

Republicans To Insist That U. S. Lines Be Given Rights In Britain

WASHINGTON, March 7—Administration senators warned today they would fight any attempt to saddle the $3,750,000,000 British loan with provisions to open British airfields to American planes.

The issue promised heated debate as the Senate Banking Committee continued hearings on the proposed loan agreement.

Sen. Ernest McFarland, D., Ariz., indicated he would push his suggestion to tie in provisions giving U. S. Commercial Airlines use of all airports built with U. S. funds throughout the British Empire. His suggestion drew the interest of Sens. Robert A. Taft, R., O., and Homer Capehart, R., Ind.

However, acting chairman Alben Barkley, D., Ky., declared that the loan should not be used "to parade all the sore thumbs" of British-American problems. His stand was backed by Assistant Secretary of State William L. Clayton.

Clayton said use of some leased bases by commercial aircraft was assured at the recent Bermuda aviation conference and that other aviation questions would be considered at future conferences.

McFarland said that if it were not settled in connection with the loan, "we'll never work it out."

His stand was seconded by Capehart who said it seemed as though "we've asked Britain to borrow the money from us." Taft said the present British attitude appeared to be that they "will let us use the airports if we can get the right to fly to them."

WARNING ISSUED ON ARCHERY AS BOY LOSES EYE

Following an accident which caused a five-year-old Circleville boy to lose an eye, a warning against the dangers of use of bows and arrows by children was sounded Thursday by officials of Pickaway County Juvenile Court.

The boy, Merle Jones, son of Mrs. Ed Seymour, Lovers Lane, was struck by an arrow shot by another lad. Removal of Merle's eye was necessary.

Highlights Of Phone Settlement

WASHINGTON, March 7—The pattern for settling telephone industry wage disputes was provided in the following agreement between the National Federation of Telephone Workers and the American Telephone & Telegraph Co.:

1. $5.00 weekly raise in the minimum and $8.00 in the maximum for plant craftsmen, outside maintenance and outside construction employes.

2. $5.00 in the minimum and $7.00 in the maximum for traffic operating employees (except New York).

3. $5.00 in the minimum and $7.00 in the maximum for clerical employees, message operators and central office helpers.

4. $5.00 across the board for caretakers, mechanics, house service employees, guards, dining service employees, etc.

5. $8.00 in the maximum for accounting assistants, staff and technical employees.

6. All schedules 8 years (transition from old to new schedules to be in accord with the war labor board policy).

7. Effective date—February 1, 1946.

8. The aforementioned wage rates to remain in effect for one year from March 6, 1946.

7. Fringe benefit of $270,000 in total cost.

10. No change in the present number of hours in the basic work week.

CHAPLIN AGAIN A FATHER

HOLLYWOOD, March 7—Oona O'Neill, 20-year-old wife of Charlie Chaplin, gave birth last night to a seven pound eight and one half ounce boy. Both mother and son were reported "doing well." The child was the couple's second.

Unreconstructed Rebel, 79, Fights To Save N. Y. Hotel

NEW YORK, March 7—(UP)—The dam-Yankees of Manhattan's Pershing square had better jump back into their skyscrapers because a 79-year-old Tennessee woman, with black and green feathers in her hat, is on the warpath.

The Pershing Square Building Corporation has decided to knockdown and dismantle the historic Murray Hill hotel, a New York landmark for the last 63 years, and blue-eyed Mrs. Ralph M. Easley has organized the hotel's permanent residents for a last ditch fight.

"I'm not doing it for myself" Mrs. Easley said today. "I have a large apartment in Larchmont that I can move into, if I must. I'm fighting for these other poor souls, and for the sake of this famous old building."

There is also a reasonable suspicion that Mrs. Easley is fighting just because she loves a fight.

The OPA has already notified the Murray Hill residents that they are to be evicted, and the OPA adds that nothing can be done about it.

"As far as they're concerned, we're already out," Mrs. Easley said, but her grin indicated that she didn't figure it would ever happen.

"Once I'm in a fight, I stay in it," Mrs. Easley said.

WORKERS GIVEN $5-8 PER WEEK WAGE INCREASES

Settlement Comes Too Late To Forestall Partial Disruption

BALTIMORE "JUMPS GUN"

Philadelphia And Pittsburgh Operators Leave Switchboards

By United Press

The National Federation of Telephone Workers accepted a new wage proposal early today, averting a nationwide telephone tie-up which would have added some 250,000 to the nation's 843,000 strike-idled workers.

The settlement was announced at 5:45 a. m. (EST) by Conciliation Director Edgar L. Warren, just 15 minutes before the strike deadline, after approval of the NFTW's member unions had been obtained in a series of long-distance telephone calls.

Service Disrupted

Announcement of the wage agreement, providing weekly wage increases of $5 to $8, came too late to forestall a partial disruption of communications.

Philadelphia and Pittsburgh operators left their switchboards, but strike captains said operators were ready to return when they received official notice. Pickets were standing by in Cleveland, New York, Chicago and Atlanta when notified that the strike was off. Company officials termed the situation "very confused."

A spokesman for the American Telephone & Telegraph Co. said the contract for long lines operators—expected to set the pattern, for the other affiliated unions—was effective imediately. He said wage increases were retroactive to Feb. 1.

Intervention Sought

Meanwhile, presidential intervention was sought in the threatened nationwide rail strike and the deadlocked General Motors walkout, now in its 107th day.

In other labor developments:

1. Some 2,000 Baltimore telephone operators "jumped the gun" by voting at a mass meeting last night to stay off the job instead of returning to their switchboards to await the strike deadline.

2. Philadelphia longshoremen, who declared a "half-holiday" yesterday, went back to work today under a new contract, granting a 25-cent hourly wage boost and a differential for handling bulk cargoes.

3. CIO longshoremen and Pacific Coast waterfront employers adjourned negotiations for one week with the union announcing it would continue plans for a coast-wise dockworkers' strike before April 1.

Talks To Be Resumed

4. The CIO Electrical Workers Union said discussions would be resumed in a few days with General Electric in an effort to reach an agreement in the 52-day-old wage walkout.

GERMANS FACE STARVATION IN COMING MONTHS

BERLIN, March 7—Lt. Gen. Sir Brian Robertson, deputy British military governor, admitted today that 10,000,000 Germans, or about half the non-farming population in the British zone, were on near starvation rations now and warned of widespread starvation threats in the next three months.

Robertson told a press conference that British occupation authorities had been advised they could expect no food imports for the German population between the end of March and the end of June.

"April, May and June will be critical months," Robertson said. "Something must be done."

The British drastically slashed all rations last Monday, reducing normal consumers to 1,014 calories a day.

wage dispute with the American Telephone & Telegraph Co. was worked out last night after more than 24 hours of almost continuous negotiations, but announcement was held up pending acceptance by all NFTW locals.

After tentatively agreeing on settlement terms, company and union representatives met separately, and NFTW President Joseph Beirne began polling locals. The Kearny, N. J., local and workers in the Southwestern Bell System hesitated but decided to go along.

Earlier, Beirne had said that "nothing short of a miracle" could forestall the walkout and strike orders were telegraphed to all 51 member unions.

International Threat

The walkout, if completely effective, would have blacked out all long-distance, overseas and manually-operated communications. If continued, union leaders said, the paralysis would have spread to newswires, radio broadcasting hookups and mechanized equipment such as local dial phones.

At Washington, President Truman reportedly was considering a request from the Detroit city council to intervene in the General Motors strike, which the council said "most seriously affects. . . the whole economic life of the city."

After another unsuccessful negotiating session yesterday, a CIO auto workers official charged that James F. Dewey had failed as labor mediator and said that the dispute could be settled only from the White House.

INDIAN RIOTERS BURN AND LOOT

Police Fire On Mob Of Several Thousand At New Delhi

NEW DELHI, March 7—Police opened fire on a mob of several thousand Indian Nationalists today after the rioters burned and looted public buildings in protest against the British victory week celebration in New Delhi.

At least eight casualties were reported when native police fired into the surging crowds three times. Indian congress leaders rushed to the scene and tried to persuade the demonstrators to disperse peacefully, but police had to use tear gas grenades before the mob scattered.

Gen. Sir Claude Auchinleck, British commander in India, led 10,000 of his troops through the city in a monster victory parade, despite the new outbreak, and none of the demonstrators attempted to interfere with the marching soldiers.

The nationalist rioters burned an electric sub-station, a post office and a railway station, and they looted a food shop and attacked the town hall before they were dispersed.

The disorders began after a group of 100 students demonstrated in the center of the city against the victory celebration.

U. S. PUBLISHES FRANCO ATTACK ALL OVER SPAIN

MADRID, March 7—The American embassy today authorized distribution of 90,000 copies of the tri-power denunciation of General Francisco Franco throughout Spain, and the Spanish government was reported considering publication of a retaliatory document.

Because the Spanish Press published a distorted version of the Allied declaration, the embassy arranged publication of the full text in its weekly publicity bulletin.

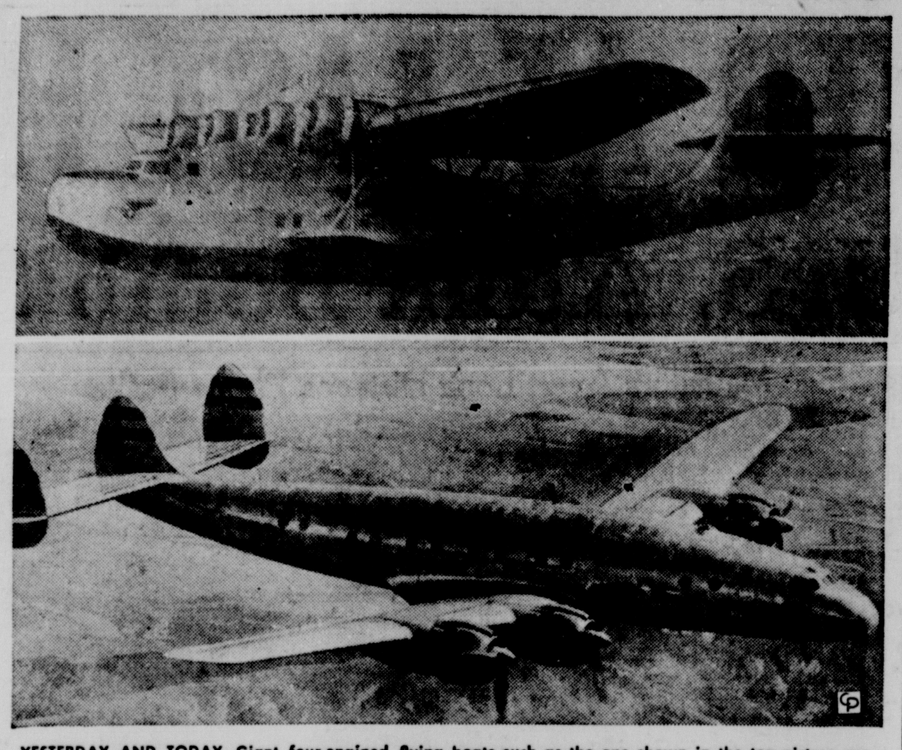

Falangist youths fought minor fist fights outside the American information service headquarters yesterday with some of several hundred Spaniards who lined up to obtain copies of the declaration and the American "White Book" on Spanish relations with the Axis.

Reliable sources said the Franco government was considering publication of a "Blue Book" to answer the American "White Book". Spanish officials asserted that the American documents didn't pack as much wallop as they had anticipated.

Giant Flying Boats Doomed As Speedier Land-Based Air Liners Take Control of Sky

YESTERDAY AND TODAY—Giant four-engined flying boats such as the one shown in the top picture are doomed to vanish from the skies, replaced by the speedier, more efficient land-based plane seen below.

By JOSEPH A. BORS
Central Press Correspondent

WASHINGTON — The colorful but clumsy and slow flying boat is rapidly becoming extinct as a passenger plane, thus bringing to a close another era in American aviation.

Before the end of this year airline officials predict that the last of the winged ships will have been replaced by speedy, long-range land planes capable of overwater hops with heavy loads.

The flying boat is a "dead duck," but it wrote a brilliant chapter in American aviation prior and during World War II.

Pan American Airways still is using flying boats on the transpacific run, but these will be replaced shortly by a fleet of Constellations.

Transcontinental and Western Airways, American and United Airlines also are acquiring fleets of four-motored land planes for transoceanic service.

The transition was speeded up by the war, when the Army and Navy were forced to speed up development of long-range land planes to link the world's far-flung battlefields.

Flying boats played an important part in the Pacific war in the early days before huge land planes were available and before the United States captured bases.

They carried vital equipment and personnel over vast distances and were able to land in lagoons near islands long before airfields were completed for land planes.

Saved Many Lives

These flying ships also saved lives of countless aviators who crash-landed at sea, and they even were used for bombing and strafing in the Pacific conflict.

Pan American opened its first overwater schedule with a six-passenger flying boat on a run between Key West, Fla., and Havana, Cuba, in October, 1927.

This type of craft reached its peace-time peak just before the war, when planes such as the China Clipper and the Yankee Clipper roared from the Pacific coast to the Far East.

However, the giant planes carried only 20 to 27 passengers, depending on the length of the hop, the longest of which was between the west coast and Honolulu, 2,400 miles.

The future of land planes was indicated recently when a B-29 bomber flew non-stop more than 8,000 miles from Guam to Washington, D. C.

A commercial version of the B-29 has been ordered by Pan American. It will be known as the Stratocruiser and will carry 80 passengers.

Constellations will be used by Pan American when it opens its round-the-world schedule in a few weeks.

The Army's Transport Command demonstrated the feasability of world-wide land plane service a few months ago by inaugurating six-day flights out of the nation's capital.

The day of the flying boat virtually is over, but most air enthusiasts agree it paved the way for present schedules on flights that soon will become routine world sky cruises.

were worried about the effect of Churchill's speech on Russian officials, they had no cause for alarm about its effect on the Russian population generally. Dispatches from Moscow reported that the Soviet Press didn't give a line to the Fulton, Mo., address.

Reds Assail Speech

The first indication of possible Soviet reaction to Churchill's address came from the national secretariat of the American Communist Party in New York. It issued a statement, published in the Daily Worker, which accused Churchill of proposing "an American-British war machine to dominate the world."

Criticism also came from Edward C. Carter, president of Russian war relief, and in debate on the floor of the house of representatives.

Carter said Churchill's speech was "irresponsible, though probably sincere." He said that Russia and Britain both were striving toward the same end—defense and security—but that the Russian methods were the ones which got criticized.

House debate flared when Rep. Frederick C. Smith, R., O., raised the question whether Churchill "is trying to inveigle us into a third world war" and whether President Truman is in sympathy with "that appeal."

Agreement Claimed

A British source close to Churchill claimed that Mr. Truman, Secretary of State James F. Byrnes and Adm. William D. Leahy fully agreed with Churchill's denunciation of Communists as a Fifth Column in all countries except the United States and the British commonwealth.

The same source reported that Churchill had been advised not to repeat his Missouri speech before the Virginia legislature tomorrow but to allow its effect to "simmer."

Bits on Books

By Enid Denham

"Your father's kissed practically every baby in the state," said mama, between clenched teeth," and it looks as though he was going to start kissing their mothers."

Papa was running for Congress. He was so handsome and his voice was so beautiful, was it any wonder the state succumbed to his charms and elected him on the Rural Free Delivery plank.

And so begins Kenneth Horan's very spritely story of her family's life in Washington is told in the amusing book, "Papa Went To Congress".

In addition to the regular members of the household, there was the French maid, and the ex-convict who did odd jobs. And when Aunt Melony arrived to visit and announced her intention of marrying President Cleveland, even that madcap family was a bit apprehensive.

Gay Story Of Washington

A gay story of Washington life as seen by the discerning eye of the young.

Papa's family was unpredictable, but what they lacked in conventionality, they more than made up in enthusiasm, even if it was for the wrong cause.

A light-hearted amusing book, comparable to "Life With Father" or Kimbrough's best.

"Your World Tomorrow", by Donald Cooley and the editors of Mechanix Illustrated Magazine, tells of the coming miracles planned for you by science and industry.

This is an exciting preview of the physical shape of things to come, advances in the field of science, industry, technology. No phases of life will be untouched.

New methods of clarifying air, quick freezing units, new devices in lighting, heating, new methods in building, the field opened by electronics, and the possibilities of the atomic era.

Hose from coal, sponges from trees, sweaters from left-over milk, purses from corn-stalks are already a reality. A glass that can be sawed and not broken, screening that does not rust or crack, all manner of labor saving devices are planned for the future.

Miracle Kitchens Coming

Kitchens will be made with so many built-in devices and cupboards that it's no wonder the befuddled cook in a recent cartoon said:

"Ma'am, I've lost that stove again!"

For the leisure that is to be brought about from all the labor-saving methods in store for us, new gadgets, new supplies, and equipment have been promised.

The one room cabin which can be carried, a canoe that folds to knapsack size, a duck hunting outfit that will be light, and welded at the seams.

Most wonderful of all, with the miracle of DDT, mosquito pests can be controlled. Many of the inventions are already in use, many are waiting simply for the cutting of the government red tape that is holding up so many of the housing plans.

Once the ball starts rolling, there is no end to what can be accomplished. And this is plotted by the machine age; what is to follow from the atomic age, can be still more wonderful. Profusely illustrated, an entertaining, a well worthwhile book this "Your World Tomorrow", by Donald Cooley".

Humorous Connecticut Tale

"Rabbit Hill," by Robert Lawson is a delightful, humorous tale of a once rundown Connecticut homeplace and the "little folk" who considered the hill their own. New folks came with a gentle "live and let live" philosophy.

It had been the hope of all the little animals that they would be "planting folks" for times had been hard "right hard' with not even good grass for Porky the ground hog to chew, no "garbidge" for Phewie the skunk, no peavine and lettuce soup for the rabbit family.

GEN. M'ARTHUR NOT TO BLAME IN SOVIET GRAB

Relieved Of Responsibility For Action Of Reds In Manchuria

WASHINGTON, March 7—Gen. Douglas MacArthur was relieved today of any responsibility for the actions of Russian commanders in Manchuria or British commanders in Indonesia.

The State Department made that clear in correcting an earlier statement by Secretary of State James F. Byrnes that MacArthur, as Supreme Allied Commander, had authority wherever there were Japanese troops.

Authority Not Clear

Still unclear, however, was the exact extent to which MacArthur's authority does extend in the Far East. It is clear in Japan, southern Korea and certain Pacific islands where he is supreme commander in fact as well as in name. But the State Department's statement falls far short of clarifying what authority, if any, MacArthur has elsewhere in the Far East in areas controlled by the Russians and British.

The best unofficial explanation obtainable after the state department's announcement last night was that MacArthur's supreme authority was to obtain the surrender of Japanese troops. Through the Emperor he directed enemy troops in various areas of the Far East to surrender to local commanders—Russian in northeast Asia and northern Korea; British Indonesia and Southeast Asia.

Absolved Of Blame

The State Department merely said that MacArthur "has no responsibility for the action of local allied commanders outside of Japan, Southern Korea and certain islands of the Pacific." That means that MacArthur cannot be blamed for:

1. Alleged removal by Russian commanders of industries from Manchuria as war booty.

2. Any actions by British Lord Louis Mountbatten's forces in Indonesia.

That of course does not relieve the nations represented by local commanders of responsibility under allied agreements for their actions. It does mean that when the United States is dissatisfied with such actions as those being followed by Russian commanders in Manchuria, its only recourse is to the Soviet government through diplomatic channels. MacArthur apparently has no authority to call parently has no authority to call such local commanders to account.

Indonesian Set-Up Confused

MacArthur's relation to Indonesia is more confused than in Manchuria. At the recent United Nations security council meeting in London, Great Britain was accused by the Soviet Ukraine of using its troops against Indonesias of failing to disarm Japanese troops in the Dutch East Indies, and of using enemy forces against Indonesians seeking independence.

British Foreign Minister Ernest Bevin emphasized at UNO that the British were in Indonesia on orders by MacArthur and were only carrying out his directions. He told en this unpleasant task by Gen. MacArthur, the supreme commander."

He was strongly supported by Dutch Foreign Minister E. N. Van Kleffens.

What is difficult for observers here to understand now is how MacArthur could be given the authority to direct Russian or British commanders to take certain action in Far Eastern areas and then apparently be freed of responsibility for how the action is carried out.

in Indonesia and Southeast Asia.

Ickes also testified that in a conversation with President Truman, "I led up to it (the subject of Pauley) several times and he asked me no questions—I supposed he didn't want to know."

HAROLD LLOYD SEEKS $500,000 FOR PLAGIARISM

HOLLYWOOD, March 7 — Harold Lloyd sought $500,000 from Columbia Pictures Corp. today in a plagiarism suit.

Lloyd charged that the company copied material from two of his silent films.

The former comedian's suit alleged sequences of "Local Boy Makes Good" were copied from "Movie Crazy," while "Three Wise Saps" stole material from "The Freshman."

Co-defendants with Columbia were Clyde Bruckman and Felix Adler, former Lloyd writers, and Jules White, producer.

Lloyd recently won a $44,102 plagiarism judgment from Universal Pictures.

MOTHER OF FIVE SEEKS DIVORCE

Wife Of Albert Marshall, Wed 26 Years, Charges Extreme Cruelty

Married for 26 years and the mother of five children, Mrs. Ina Marie Marshall filed suit for divorce in Pickaway County Common Pleas Court, Thursday, accusing Albert Marshall, Walnut Township farmer, of gross neglect of duty and extreme cruelty.

Declaring that they were married June 6, 1919 at Newport, Ky., Mrs. Marshall's petition says her husband operates a 280-acre farm; that he has refused to provide properly for her and has refused to give her money to buy clothing and other necessities.

Blow Is Charged

Mrs. Marshall also charges that he has made "a concerted effort" to drive her from their home and that several months ago he pushed her into a corner of their home and struck her in the face.

In addition to a divorce Mrs. Marshall asks for alimony and the custody of a 17-year-old son, Maynard. Another minor child is self-supporting, the petition says, and the other three children are adults. Judge Emmitt L. Crist granted an injunction restraining Marshall from interfering with Mrs. Marshall or the youngest son and from disposing of property.

Farmer Sues Wife

In another divorce suit, filed Thursday, Henry Clark, Perry Township farmer, charges Mrs. Dora Clark, of Rutledge, Tenn., with gross neglect of duty.

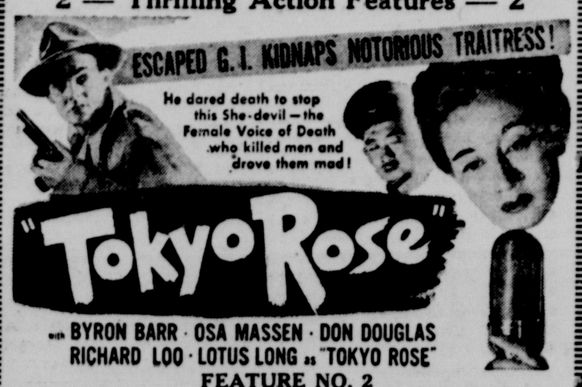

Reciting that they were married Oct. 1, 1931 at Rutledge and that they are the parents of an 11-year-old daughter, Catherine, the petition says that when Clark moved his farming operations from Tennessee to Ohio his wife refused to make her home with him in Pickaway County and declined to leave Rutledge.

ARMY TO DUMP, SCRAP SURPLUS

MANILA, March 7 — Hundreds of millions of dollars worth of obsolete or unserviceable American military equipment will be dumped into the sea in the next few months or cut up and sold for scrap metal.

This vast junking program will start immediately under orders from the top U. S. army commanders in the Western Pacific, who see no other way of disposing of their useless surpluses.

Army spokesmen said it was assumed that the United Nations Organization had been fully informed of the scrap program through the U. S. state department.

Guns, Tanks Included

The items to be junked range all the way from obsolete 1914 machine guns to light tanks and 20-millimeter automatics, and will include many types of chemical warfare, signal corps and engineering equipment.

Army officers said much of the surplus equipment will be towed out into the China sea and dumped. They pointed out that dumping into the sea would save the expensive job of cutting up gun barrels and similar materials which have little or no sale value as residual scrap.

Other items will be cut up and, if saleable for civilian use, will be turned over to the Foreign Liquidation Commission.

It was estimated that about $450,000,000 worth of army equipment remains to be disposed of, in addition to more than $300,000,000 worth already declared scrap and transferred to the FLC.

$40,000,000 Worth Sold

The commission was understood to have sold more than $40,000,000 of that equipment between Nov. 1 and Feb. 1, obtaining about 40 cents on the dollar of the original cost.

Before Nov. 1, 1946, the army itself sold $40,000,000 worth, mostly to the Dutch and Australian governments.

In the War Department order authorizing the Western Pacific junking program, it was learned, there is a provision for a stockpile of selected types of purely military equipment which will be returned to the United States.

In addition, all new or serviceable surpluses of civilian-type equipment which the FLC cannot sell overseas within a "reasonable" time will also be sent back to America.

In England a child has been named Uno after the United Nations Organization. To make it perfect, says the man at the next desk, the kid's last name should be Watt.

From where I sit ... by Joe Marsh

Jess Turner's labor troubles

For four years Jess Turner ran his harness shop alone. But now his nephew's discharged from the Navy and is back to help him.

Right away, it seems that nephew Delbert has some new ideas. He wants more money, shorter hours—and meanwhile Jess' expenses have been going up!

So what does Jess do? He invites Delbert to sit down over a friendly glass of beer and talk the situation over. Jess figures how he can give Delbert some extra dollars, and certain interests in the business; and Delbert figures how he can speed up production on harnesses—and do some saddle work, besides. And they seal the bargain with another friendly glass of beer.

Of course, all labor troubles aren't so simple. But from where I sit, if there could be more friendly discussion — more give and take—more tolerance and understanding—both sides would be a heap better off.

Training Camp Briefs

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla., March 7—"Fireman Johnny" Murphy, the veteran relief pitcher, once famed as Lefty Gomez' "shadow," agreed to terms with the New York Yankees yesterday and will report next week. Now 37, Murphy retired from baseball in 1943, after winning 12 games and losing four, and has been working on the atomic bomb at Oak Ridge, Tenn., for the past two years.

SARASOTA, Fla., March 7—Manager Joe Cronin named today a 19-man squad—the probable nucleus for his 1946 team—to make an airplane trip to Havana Friday for a two-game series with the Washington Senators.

The squad: eight pitchers—Tex Hughson, Dave Ferriss, Jim Wilson, Mickey Harris, Joe Dobson, Mace Brown, Charley Wagner and Mel Deutsch; two catchers—Frankie Pytlak and Bill Conroy; five infielders—Paul Compbell, Bobby Doerr, Johnny Pesky, Ernie Andres and Ed Pellagrini; and four outfielders—Ted Williams, Dom DiMaggio, George Metkovich and Andy Gilbert.

PASADENA, Calif., March 7—Manager Jimmy Dykes of the Chicago White Sox today announced his starting lineup for Saturday's game against the Pittsburgh Pirates: Catcher Tom Jordan; Hal Trosky, first base; Chet Hajduk, second; Luke Appling, short; Bob Kennedy, third, and Taft Wright, Thurman Tucker and Wally Moses, outfielders.

CLEARWATER, Fla., March 7—Mickey Rocco, regular first baseman last season, was ordered to reach into his pocket for his pen or his own expense money today if he wants to remain at the Cleveland Indians' training camp.

Rocco, a .264 hitter in 143 games last year, "must either sign his 1946 contract or pay his own way," Vice President Roger Peckinpaugh said. "He is through living here at the expense of the club."

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla., March 7—Manager Eddie Dyer named three former servicemen, a southpaw and two righthanders, to start for the St. Louis Cardinals Saturday in their opening exhibition game against the New York Yankees. They are pitchers Fred Martin and Max Surkont, bidding for their first regular jobs with the Cardinals, and Howie Pollet, who won eight and lost four games with the Redbirds before he entered the service.

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla., March 7 — Rookie First baseman Walt Bubien, former University of Pennsylvania athlete, was labeled as a "coming Gehrig" today by Al Simmons, Philadelphia athletic coach.

TAMPA, Fla., March 7—Manager Bill McKechnie was enthusiastic today about the hitting of Rookie first baseman Ted Kluszewski, all-big ten football end last Fall at Indiana.

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla., March 7—Negro Jackie Robinson, the Rookie shortstop, went hitless in yesterday's intra-squad game as the Dodger "B" club defeated the Montreal "B" team, 4-2. In a second game, Lew Riggs singled home two runs in the ninth inning to give the Dodger "A" team a 4-4 tie with the Montreal "A" club.

BATESVILLE, Ark., March 7—Elwin (Preacher) Roe, star Pittsburgh Pirate pitcher, said today he expected to join the Bucs at their San Bernardino, Calif., training camp within two weeks. He suffered a fractured skull in an accident a month ago.

LAKELAND, Fla., March 7—Manager Steve O'Neill of the Detroit Tigers named an all-G.I. lineup for today's opening exhibition game against the Washington Senators. Virgil Trucks, Al Benton and Norm Schott will hurl for the world champions against the senators' Emil (Dutch) Leonard, Rae Scarborough and Sid Hudson.

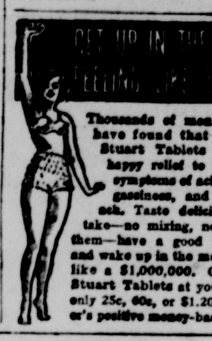

MIAMI, Fla., March 7—The Buddy Kerr-Bill Rigney battle for the regular New York Giant shortstop berth was waxing hotter by the minute today with manager Mel Ott "high" on both players.

TOO MANY ISMS SEEN BY HEAD OF FARM CO-OP

Lincoln Says People Must Solve Their Problems By Self Help

COLUMBUS, March 7—With the economic conditions of the nation in turmoil, most persons are about to discard the robe of a free nation and are seeking their salvation in some sort of "ism," according to Murray D. Lincoln, general manager of the state Farm Bureau Cooperative Association, who spoke at its recent annual meeting in Columbus. He termed cooperative action as the salvation of our democratic way of life.

"Now, great alarm is being expressed by some advocates of 'monoply' capitalism that farm cooperatives and other non-profit organizations for service are destroying our country.

Protection Stressed

"The only thing that these things is destroying is the ability and opportunity of a few to exploit the many," he said.

"But they are the very essence of democracy and free enterprise. They are actions for general good with the individual benefiting in proportion to his own contribution.

"This kind of action will save democracy as we have known it," Lincoln asserted, "if we can have people understand the implications of this present period in world history.

"The real problem as I see it is whether people are going to seek the evolutionary method of solving their problems through voluntary self help agencies or whether we are going to throw in the sponge and look to the government as the all powerful agency to solve our problems.

Compliments Farmers

"And as much as we may dislike to do so, we must confess that the latter road is the direction that most people in the world are taking."

He complimented farmers for having the foresight to establish cooperatives and being faithful to them to the extent that practically every phase of business in the nation is being affected by them.

He urged farmers to keep pushing the cooperative idea and to branch out to aid the urban dweller in the future.

"This is the kind of courage and self reliance that America needs today," he said.

RULES CHANGED ON MACHINERY FOR FARM VETS

Priorities Issued Before February 20 Must Be Used Before March 20

The order under which veterans were given preference certificates to obtain farm machinery has been changed, John Boggs, county AAA committeeman, said Thursday.

Veterans who hold such certificates, issued prior to February 20 must present them to a dealer on or before March 20 to have them accepted, he said.

Priority Limits Set

If the dealer accepts the preference certificate on or before March 20, and finds it impossible to obtain the machinery to enable him to honor the certificate by April 20, the certificate becomes void unless renewed before that date, Mr. Boggs explained. Renewal can be applied for at the county AAA office, where the certificate was issued.

The dealer is no longer required to fill an order on a veteran's preference from equipment he has on hand at the time the certificate is presented to him.

The certificate must, however, be honored when the next item of like equipment is received by the dealer. The certificates are to be honored in the order of their receipt by the dealer.

Dealer Requirements Eased

The dealer is not required to accept preference certificates from veterans who live outside his trade territory.

Photostatic copies of the preference certificates are not valid. Only the original certificate can be accepted by the dealer.

Preference orders issued after February 20, must be placed with a dealer within 15 days or they become void and if the dealer is unable to satisfy the certificate within 60 days of the date the certificate is issued, it becomes void unless a renewal is obtained from the county AAA committee and placed in the dealer's hands before the expiration date of the certificate.

Certificates will no longer be issued to veterans for the purpose of doing custom work.

Mercy Ship's Seasick Saga Bared By Mules 'Ex-Valet

MIAMI, Fla., March 7—The Rockland Victory was far at sea today on a mission of mercy with a strange cargo of seasick horses and wild mules a motley crew.

Ross W. Anderson, a college professor from Portland, Ore., was ill and was put ashore here. He explained how the ship left Houston, Tex., bound for Trieste on the Adriatic with a cargo of 750 horses and 50 wild mules for Yugoslav farms.

The ship's crew worked the vessel, and left the handling of the livestock to volunteers recruited by the Church of the Brethren.

"The crew came from farms in Kansas and Illinois and from colleges all over the country," Anderson said. "They were men who had never seen the sea and didn't know much about horses. Two were Mennonite elders with long, flowing beards. One boy had never shaved.

"A couple of men went ashore the night before sailing, and came back loaded with wine. They refused to do their work, and were about as stubborn as the mules.

The horses were seasick and often took a good bite out of one of the herders. The ship's purser was kept busy giving shots for horsebite. The mules would slip their halters—and it's not easy to catch one particular mule in a hold full of mules."

Dan West, of Elgin, Ill., conceived the idea of sending livestock to war-stricken people. UNRRA became interested and offered to furnish transportation for the cattle.

CHINESE PRESS DECLARED FREE

All Censorship Abolished; Ruling Extends To Re-Occupied Areas

CHUNGKING, March 7—Information Minister K. C. Wu announced the immediate abolition of censorship of incoming and outgoing news dispatches and of local publications in re-occupied areas.

Censorship in Free China was abolished last Oct. 1.

"Freedom of the press is a predetermined policy of the government, and also a principle always advocated by the Kuomintang," Wu said.

"Unfortunately the war brought in censorship as a necessary evil. But immediately after the Japanese surrender, the government on Oct. 1 abolished censorship in Free China.

"Censorship in the recovered areas was retained because peace and order were not fully restored in those places."

ON GUARD

AT the end of the last great war, when our foreign enemies were obviously beaten, it is said to have been a common practice for men at the front to throw their guns and other weapons into the trenches, merely kicking a little dirt over them, perhaps, as they started for home. Armistice Day was grand and glorious. We Americans were sitting on top of the world. Our foes could never rise again, and there would be no more such tragic wars. So we thought.

There was less jollification this last time. Memories of the former wars remained. There are more men left on the job now to keep our foes from new insurrection against the civilized world. Yet there has been a considerable resurgence of the old, careless feeling, among men still in arms, and among people at home waiting for their men to return.

This is dangerous. It begins to dawn on cautious Americans that the war may not really be over yet—that there are still strong forces of potential evil awaiting new upsurges of rebellion when war-weary men and nations shall have lowered their guard again. There may still be armies willing to follow them. We cannot throw away our guns.

MEN FROM WISCONSIN

THE choice of Julius A. Krug of Wisconsin as Secretary of the Interior adds one more name to the surprisingly short list of Wisconsin men who have served in the cabinet. There have been only five before Krug, and four of them served as postmaster-general.

Alexander W. Randall, an early governor of the state, held office under President Johnson. President Arthur gave the post to ex-senator Timothy O. Howe, and President Cleveland to William F. Vilas, remembered for his Tammany-defying praise of Cleveland at the 1884 Democratic convention, "We love him for the enemies he has made." Vilas was later transferred for a short time to the interior department. The procession of postmaster-generals was completed by Henry C. Payne, an eminently practical politician, whose appointment by Theodore Roosevelt startled some of the president's friends.

The one Wisconsin cabinet member who did not serve in the postoffice department was ex-Gov. Jeremiah M. Rusk, President Harrison's secretary of agriculture. "Uncle Jerry," as everyone called him, was genial and competent, but the department was new, and his appointment did not rank in importance with Krug's.

Don't talk to an extremist unless you already agree with him, and just want to have a good time strengthening your faith and denouncing the dumbbells on the other side. You can't speed up a turtle or rein in a rabbit. Conservatives are born, not made. Recognition of this fact makes for political wisdom and social peace. But there's a neutral band in between, where intelligent people can discuss controversial issues profitably.

NEWS BEHIND THE NEWS

By PAUL MALLON

WASHINGTON, March 7—State Secretary Byrnes has been more friendly to the Soviets on the inside than in the public view. He has been active in off-the-record talks with newsmen to press the point that this government had nothing whatever to do with the atom-spy case against Russia, presented by Canada. Mr. Byrnes has claimed he and Mr. Truman did not in any way cooperate with Canada, and knew nothing of what was afoot, aside from a mention of the matter, months ago, when Prime Minister MacKenzie King suggested the evidence he had then at hand to the President. This was during the Attlee visit to Washington last Fall. The mere mention a few days ago that Americans might have been involved in the investigation of possible loss of their own secret through Canada, sent him into spasms of off-the-record dismay and denial. The reporter who asked him the question upon the basis of information obtained from Canada, had to explain his source apologetically.

In the world of diplomacy beyond the public eye then, Byrnes has firmly established himself in the position that he is a neutral as between Bevin and Moscow. He has been urging the press to "stop picking on Russia."

About a week ago, I heard rumblings from the Byrnes sanctum that a firming of American policy toward Russia was at hand. Since then, he has criticized Russian tactics in the far east—himself—publicly, thus causing newsmen to grumble that his policy now is to let no one criticize except himself.

But personally I believe a change is coming. Mr. Byrnes was not accomplishing anything the way he was going. His activities were not popular in congress where his appropriations are being cut. He built up this winter a new policy based largely on saying "yes" to Russia and caused all America (indeed, the world) to start wondering what would happen the first time he would say "no." A world order built on yeses can last no longer than the first no.

As the people could plainly see the flimsiness of the card-house of peace which Byrnes had been building, some currency has been granted rumors of war by some people—one, widely circulated, holds Russia will invade Turkey and Britain will go to her assistance; another that Communists fighting in China will bring us to her aid.

These rumors wholly ignore the fact that we have demobilized and the British are not strong enough to fight anyone in the rumored zones of the near east and China.

If these suggestions of Russian aggression have any soundness at all—or even remote possibilities—we are not only pursuing an ineffective foreign policy, but the wrong military policy. Pearl Harbor should have taught us to be less sleepy—or rather to be less self-centered in our own hopes, thoughts and problems, to the exclusion of what the other fellow is thinking and doing.

Russia has not demobilized. We do not know much of what is going on inside Russia herself, but our official eye has seen that the 2,000,000 Russian troops in the occupied zones, unlike our troops, do not wish to go home. Apparently they like it better outside. Also for many months, Russia has had a formidable army on the Manchurian border or in North China, and on the Turkish border. I do not anticipate war. It is unthinkable that Moscow would embark upon Hitleresque aggressions. Like people generally, I resolve all doubts in favor of what I want, and do not feel

DIET AND HEALTH

Hypertension in Middle Age

By HERMAN N. BUNDESEN, M.D.

SINCE the average life span in the United States is increasing, more persons it would seem, have a chance of developing hypertension, because hypertension is more common in the middle-aged and elderly than in young persons. When the blood pressure is taken the doctor determines the pressure when the heart contracts, which is known as the systolic, and the pressure when the heart is relaxed is known as the diastolic pressure.

According to Dr. Reginald H. Smithwick of Boston, a persistent rise in the diastolic pressure is due to increased resistance to the flow of the blood through the tiny arteries. This resistance to the flow of the blood through the arteries is due to changes in the arteries themselves, as well as to some contraction of the arteries brought about by the muscles in their walls.

Controlled By Nerves

These muscles are controlled by the nerves of the sympathetic or involuntary nervous system. This contraction of the muscles in the blood vessel walls may be brought about in the patient with high blood pressure by pain, emotional upsets, by changing the position of the body, and by exposure to cold.

At the beginning of this type of high blood pressure, the rise in pressure may appear only from time to time. However, sooner or later, the blood pressure remains elevated even though the patient is lying down.

In an effort to relieve hypertension, operations on the sympathetic nervous system have been carried out. One hundred and fifty-six patients with high blood pressure have been operated on at the Massachusetts General Hospital and observed for a period of from one to five years following the operation. A lowering in the diastolic blood pressure of from 10 to 30 millimeters of mercury was noted in eight out of every ten patients in whom the diastolic pressure before operation was from 100 to 162.

Results Found

It was found that women did better than men. There was also some improvement in the condition of the heart and in the action of the kidneys. The patients also seemed to feel better following the operation.

The operation consisted in removing certain sections of the involuntary nervous system, namely, the nerves known as the great splanchnic nerves and the trunks of the nerves along the spine.

Thus it would seem that in certain types of high blood pressure this operation on the nervous system may be of some value, when other measures fail to bring relief.

A JOB FOR JENNY

CHAPTER THIRTY

STEVE COULD forget, too, the sense of strain under which he continuously labored . . . impatience, irritation, which he must not betray, neither to his patients, who certainly didn't deserve it, nor to his father's watchful, anxious eyes. Heck, he said to himself, I'm as warped as my hand.

He could argue himself out of it . . . rationalize it, tell himself how lucky he was. Oh, sure. All the words, all the answers to the questions, he knew them all. But it didn't make a darned bit of difference. He did his work, and well, with every ounce of skill and knowledge he possessed, and he was learning more every day. He forced himself to a genuine interest in each case, to anxiety, and rejoicing, depending on the case and its outcome. And he consoled himself with the knowledge that he was prolonging his father's life.

But the heart has to be in the healing, Bert's heart was always in his healing. Steve's was not.

So, the day in Portland was an interlude, a respite, beginning with their early start in Mary's fast, smooth-running car, which she drove. She permitted him to spell her at the wheel, because she understood it was a matter of pride when he offered. Early morning was lovely along the coast, the sea with the memory of sunrise still in it, the wet brown rocks, the creaming surf. The little towns were charming, in the sunlight . . . they were picture towns, white steeples pointing to heaven, white houses, green shutters, picket fences . . . cows grazing, a horse kicking up his polished heels and running free in a meadow . . . a startled squirrel . . . the flame-flash of an oriole's wings, a song sparrow singing from the top of a maple.

Yet, after they'd reached Foster's, after luncheon, and the discussion and the sightseeing, Steve was through, he was bored, he'd had enough.

He let Mary talk to Foster about the hospital. After all, it was Hathaway money. You must expect that they demand a very large hand in it, all of them. But now and then he made practical, professional suggestions. He did not, privately, consider Foster the man for the job. Foster had made his reputation in the building of beautiful country homes—it was he who had remodeled the Elton place for the Hathaways. He was an expert on restoration, and he restored with a loving and respectful hand. Also he built new houses, very modern, functional and fine. He had some business buildings to his credit—a bank, an office building, as well. But the nearest he had ever come to planning a hospital was when remaking a fabulous country house into a sanatorium, an expensive haven for the very tired, the very neurotic, all of whom were also very rich.

Anyway, the thing was in its earliest stages. Hathaway had given the green light cautiously: talk with Foster, have some plans drawn up, see what it will cost initially, had been his instructions. What it would cost, in the end, was another matter, as was the proposed endowment. This thing would be kicked around plenty before anything came of it. In the meantime Steve wasn't going to put in his two cents' worth of discouragement. When Hathaway was hooked, he told himself, watching Mary put her pointed, tinted finger on a rough drawing, watching her dark eyes, bright with excitement, then was the time to tear up a lot of plans and start from scratch.

His unrest finally communicated itself to her and she made the necessary graceful social gestures which would release them from the hospitality of Foster and his rather attractive but definitely simonized wife. Driving off, Mary suggested that Mr. Foster had designed the woman he married, and had had her built to specifications.

So they left, and later than they had expected, and stopped for dinner, also later than Mary had planned, at a pleasant old-fashioned inn set well back from a village street. The bar was quiet and pleasant, and the liquor good. Mary, Steve observed, drank three cocktails. They had, apparently, no effect upon her; but Steve, limiting himself to one, thought it would be wise if he drove the rest of the way. Not that the thought pleased him. He had learned that, despite his faithful exercising of his hand and the various therapies suggested for it, his arm ached after a long day, and his stiff fingers, which could be cajoled into doing their share at the wheel, became stiffer still.

They had a wonderful dinner, and hearty. Steamed clams and chowder, pilot biscuits and lobster, broiled to perfection, the coral beautiful and enticing against the paler, succulent flesh. A green salad, black coffee. It was very good, and Steve enjoyed it, industriously picking at the wonderful meat while Mary, not at all ostentatiously, cracked the claws for him.

"The Foster lunch," she said critically, "was a little on the chichi side, don't you think? Mrs. Foster makes with the crystal and napery and charm, but so little nourishment! The omelet melted in my mouth and that's all it did. The salad had been breathed upon by garlic, but there was so little to breathe upon. The iced tea," she added, "was good, and they evidently have a mint bed. And I like raspberries and cream, but not whipped to such a now-you-see-it-and-now-you-don't consistency. Nourishment," said Mary, "is what I craved . . . and what, the Lord helping me, I gits."

Steve grinned. A refreshing girl, Miss Hathaway. He liked women who didn't diet, and said so. She looked at him, smiling.

"I don't have to," she said happily. "If I had to, I would. I'm a very vain woman. Did you know that I had been jilted?"

He thought she was joking. He asked, "Are you kidding?" and she shook her sleek black head.

"At the altar, brother," she said.

She told him about Pat, and Steve listened. He remarked, a little awkwardly, that Pat was probably a little mental. Then he added, "As far as that goes, we're all jilted at one time or another." He told her about the nurse at M. G. H., not that he wished to confide intimately in his companion, but one indiscreet confidence engenders or deserves another, and perhaps would stem her flow of reminiscences.

Mary said indifferently, "Probably I'll never marry." She looked at him coolly. "I don't like ties," she said, "nor obligations and restrictions. Once I thought I did. I was willing to knot the apron strings around my waist and toil over what is known as a hot stove—oh, figuratively, of course," she said, "as I had no intention of turning my back on the Hathaway interests. Willing, too, to have a half a dozen kids, although I don't like children really, as they embarrass me—all of whom would look like Pat. But not any more."

He suggested gently that one day she would change her mind.

"When, as the phrase runs, I've got over it?" She looked at him over the rim of her coffee cup and her eyes laughed, without amusement. "Don't be naive, dear," she said. "I am over it. I've recovered. And glad of it. Pat was a very mediocre young man, with a less than average intelligence but a beautiful body, and one of those faces which once seen you remember. Just a collection of features each of which was right for the other, if you get what I mean. But the whole business taught me that domesticity was not for me. I escaped by an eyelash, and a blonde at a USO—and I'm grateful."

He said, a little bewildered, "You'd make someone a very good wife."

"You, for instance?" She leaned back and smiled. She said, "I think so too—in the proper setting. A good house, a good address, a fine cook and the invitations issued to the right people, and I think you'd become a very fashionable practitioner. You pick the specialty. Diagnostician?" she asked critically, as if she were trying on hats.

Steve flushed. He said, "Not me. I'm plodding along in the home town doing my job."

She said, "That's stupid of you."

Steve looked at her a moment and in that moment saw her clear and didn't like her very well. But her appeal remained. You can dislike someone who appeals to you. He said quietly, "It's my father's job. He was better at it than I'll ever be, but—"

She said, "What's good enough for your father is good enough for you, I suppose. Wonderful phrase."

He said, "Too good, I dare say."

STARS SAY—

For Thursday, March 7

THIS day still finds static conditions and tendency toward delay and obstacle, on which all the resources, talents, skill and initiative must be aggressively marshalled in order to break up crystalization and menacing and critical circumstances.

While high-pressure work may prove definitely effective in breaking up obstructions and already started into high gear treasured major issues, yet this should be done in co-operation with others of free and warm interest, rather than in effort to drastically tear down resistance. Keep calm, quiet but ready for the psychological moment.

If It Is Your Birthday

Those whose birthday it is are sure to have a year to test their worth, skill, ingenuity and sound purpose, since a static and inert set of circumstances may seem to block the wheels of progress. And, while a dynamic push might be effective in setting affairs into whirling motion, yet there must be discretion, sound approach, with sedate and calm thinking to frame workable ways and means, especially since the stake is high and the final issues far-reaching in significance.

Tact and personal calmness and concentration go far in shattering resistance.

A child born on this day may have a conflicting and warring disposition, which might be assisted to fine constructive work and pleasure in life by early supervision and training.

BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

By Shepard Barclay

"The Authority on Authorities"

THOSE WHO WON'T SEE

"THERE ARE none so blind as those who will not see" should have been written about bridge if it had not been penned before. Sometimes a player gets his mind fixed on a certain plan and refuses to let himself be detoured from it, even though evidence is presented to his view proving that the plan won't work. For some cantankerous reason, he simply doesn't see the evidence, and goes right ahead as he originally intended to.

West was more than pleased to hear his partner's double. He had it firmly in his mind that South held the guarded club K as a basis for the No Trump game call, and so counted on two tricks in that suit. His diamond A would make three tricks which he himself could get against the declarer, and he saw a chance for an additional one by a ruff of hearts if East held the spade A, which seemed likely from the double.

So, to set up the ruff, he led his heart singleton, which South won. The declarer led his diamond Q, which West refused to cover, then the diamond 3, the A winning. West returned his spade 4, fortunately catching East with the A. The latter fired back the heart 3, and West ruffed for his side's third trick.

All that West had to do now, to set the contract one trick, was lay down his club A. But he still had his heart set on two tricks in clubs, so led the diamond 10. East ruffed with the spade J and South over-ruffed with the K. The spade 7 to the 10 dropped East's last trump, and the diamonds now furnished discards of South's clubs, enabling him to make his contract.

If West had taken one clear look at the dummy's diamonds when he was in the lead for the last time, he would have seen that they could not help giving South discards of his clubs unless East had the spade K—a very unlikely eventuality, since East had played the A on the trump lead. He should have forgotten the idea of two club tricks and laid down the A to make sure of setting the contract.

Demo Senators Confident Truman Will Run in 1948 | Broadcast Television, FM From High Flying Planes

Special to Central Press

● WASHINGTON—Democratic senators high in party councils are confident that President Truman will be a candidate for the nomination in 1948, and some of them are predicting beyond a doubt that he will get it.

This view was voiced recently by Senators Lister Hill (D) of Alabama, the Democratic "whip," and Carl Hatch (D) of New Mexico. Senator Kenneth McKellar (D) of Tennessee, who succeeded Mr. Truman as presiding officer of the Senate, commented that any man who tries to beat him in 1948 "will have a hard fight on his hands."

President Truman

At the same time, a number of Senate Democrats are reserving opinion on this question.

They point out that a lot of things can happen in the next two years, that the prospect of Mr. Truman's nomination will depend on how well he handles the reconversion problem, and that marked political changes may occur should there be an economic upset.

Commerce Secretary Henry A. Wallace's statement that he would not oppose Mr. Truman for the nomination or resign from the cabinet is taken at face value by some Democratic senators.

However, others contend that Wallace still is the potential candidate of the Democratic "left wing" for the presidential nomination and that he will try to capture the nomination if the political climate is favorable.

● SCIENTISTS NOW ARE EXPERIMENTING with the broadcast[illegible] of television and FM (frequency modulation) from planes flying at an altitude of 30,000 feet.

Initial experiments are being carried out by the Westinghouse corporation, whose experts insist that the broadcasts are clearer and also that the use of a plane eliminates construction of costly stations and booster points at frequent intervals.

According to these men, eight such specially equipped planes flying in lazy circles high above the earth could provide television and FM cheaply and quickly to most of the nation's populated areas. Broadcasts from one plane could cover several large states.

When AFL President William Green delivered a blast from the White House steps against restoration of wage controls, newsmen were puzzled. It was not like Green to be uttering such protests at the executive mansion.

Later the information "leaked" that Lewis had a hand in the affair. Green's statement and the official viewpoint of the UMW coincided almost word for word.

English Bride Arrives On Wedding Anniversary

Mrs. Arthur Johnson Comes To Live In Circleville

Another war bride has arrived in Circleville. She came to America to join her husband, Arthur Johnson, West Mill street, on the Queen Mary, which docked in New York harbor last week.

Mrs. Johnson is the second English girl to come to Circleville to live. Mrs. Clyde Dean arrived last Summer thereby being Circleville's first war bride.

Mrs. Johnson was met in Columbus on March third, by her husband. One year ago on March 3rd Mr. and Mrs. Johnson became man and wife in Ipswich, England, at a pretty wedding ceremony. When her husband told her she might arrive in time for their anniversary she said "I never thought we should."

The petite, attractive Mrs. Johnson arrived with about 2,000 other British wives and children and a few UNO delegates. The trip was very calm and uneventful. Many passengers were sea sick but she was not among them, because she had crossed the channel many times to visit Holland and neighboring countries as she has spent most of her vacations abroad. She saw very little of New York City she said because she had to remain on the ship until a bus came to take her to the Pennsylvania station in New York. She boarded the train and in another 12 hours was in Columbus with her husband.

"I'm quite impressed with Circleville. The green roofs and white houses are an individual style. They look very nice," she said. Mrs. Johnson has two sisters and one brother in England. She hasn't had time to miss them yet as everyone makes me feel so at home here.

The Johnsons plan to make their home in Circleville, where Mr. Johnson is employed as an auditor at the Ralston Purina mills. Mrs. Johnson held an office position in a flour milling industry in England.

RED SCIENTISTS FIND SERUM TO FIGHT OLD AGE

New Remedy Helps Preserve Tissue Linking Cells And Blood Vessels

MOSCOW, March 7.—(UP)—Russian scientists have perfected a rejuvenation serum which will slow the advance of old age and which, over a span of many generations, may ultimately prolong the normal human life to 100 or 150 years.

But don't throw away the cane and light out for Moscow. Soviet biologists want it clearly understood that the foundation of youth just doesn't exist. Not yet anyway. Their discovery is not a magical elixir of life, but a laboriously-developed serum which helps prevent bodily deterioration.

Preserves Tissue

The serum, known as "ACS," preserves the connective tissues linking the bodily cells with the blood vessels and stimulates cellular activity, thereby improving the work of all the organs and ultimately extending the life span.

ACS already is far beyond the experimental stage and is being used clinically all over the Soviet Union. It has proved effective in the treatment of broken bones and all kinds of wounds.

Soviet scientists say that children at Leningrad whose growth was stunted by the privations of the city's siege began to grow again when they were injected with the new serum.

Several prominent Moscow actors and artists, all in their sixties, are known to be taking the serum periodically with an attendant improvement in their working capacity and general fitness.

Discovered By Ukrainian

The new drug was discovered by a famous Ukrainian scientist, the 64-year-old Alexander Alexandrovich Bogomoletz, president of the Ukrainian Academy of Scientists.

Professor Joseph Neyman, one of Bogomoletz' most prominent pupils, explained that the serum was based on the theory that the body begins to age when the connective tissues wear out or deteriorate. The deterioration, in turn, is caused by bodily abuse, overwork, nervous exhaustion and improper living.

Neyman said Bogomoletz found that stimulation of the connective tissues produced a rejuvenating effect on all the bodily organs and "toned up" thepatient's entire system.

He said the ACS serum is perfectly harmless so long as the patient's kidneys are normal. It improves the general metabolism, acts as a general tonic and reduces fatigue.

Conservative In Hopes

But Neyman, like most scientists, was extremely conservative in discussing the serum and denied that any "sensational" discoveries have yet been made toward the goal of prolonging life.

The actual effectiveness of ACS in extending the life span, he said, could be demonstrated only by clinical observations conducted over many generations, which would be experimentally impossible.

Neyman said Bogomoletz has received pathetic letters from aging people all over the world who beg him for a phial of the alleged "elixir of life."

Bogomoletz regards them as "drowning men clutching at straws," and he offers all of them the same old-fashioned and conventional advice which he worked out for himself after many years of studying proved cases of longevity in the Caucasus and Siberia:

"If you wish a long life, live simply, civilizedly. Don't overwork, overeat or worry."

Other Bogomoletz Dictums

His most famous dictum to would-be centenarians is:

"The art of extending life is the art of not artificially shortening it."

He also is fond of quoting this ancient French saying:

"The sparrow's life span is short because the sparrow is too lecherous."

'Talent Kids' Of Science Win $2,400 Scholarships

WASHINGTON, March 7—A 17-year-old girl who wants to cure mental diseases through surgery and a lad of 16 who hopes to find a way to relieve the suffering of cancer victims today held top honors as the nation's "talent kids" of science.

Marilyn Rohrer, of Elizabethtown, Pa., and Jules Alfred Kernen, of St. Louis, were picked as winners of the two $2,400 Westinghouse science scholarships.

Their selection followed a nationwide hunt for scientific genius among high-school students. They won out in the final tests here of 40 runners-up sifted down from 16,000 original contestants.

Both Marilyn and Jules agreed that one way to success is to get an early start. She started removing brains from animals at the age of seven. He displayed his enthusiasm for science when he was only three as he played with a toy "doctor's set."

The pretty brown-eyed blonde girl, alarmed by the prevalence of mental diseases which, she noted, have been increased by the war, believes that surgery can help.

She will use her scholarship money to enter the University of Pennsylvania pre-medical school this Fall, and hopes to learn more about this "new field."

Jules, a black-haired boy fired with enthusiasm for medical research, asserted that cancer may be conquered "because nothing is imposaible."

He believes that recent atomic discoveries may hold the long-sought answer to the cure of cancer.

Jules hopes to use his prize money for a pre-medical course at Harvard university. Later he wants to study at Washington university in St. Louis.

UPWARD TREND IN FARM PRICES SHOWN IN OHIO

COLUMBUS, March 7—Prices received for their produce by Ohio farmers showed a general upward trend during the period from January 15 to February 15, figures released by the Office of the Agricultural Statistician showed.

Prices of all principal grains were up from a month ago, and all except those for corn and oats were higher than during a similar period a year ago.

Hay prices fell off slightly during the period, but livestock prices generally showed a slight increase.

FARMERS PLAN STRIKE MEETING AT MANSFIELD

MANSFIELD, March 7—Farmers from six midwestern states will attend a farm strike meeting in Mansfield March 14, H. H. Fackler, chairman of the Ohio Marketing Quota Protest Association, said today.

Fackler said he had received a telegram sent by Seven Anderson, a member of the American Vigilante Committee with headquarters at Edgar, Neb., saying that farmers from Nebraska, Iowa, Oklahoma, Texas, South Dakota and Illinois would attend the meeting.

A vote was planned to determine whether a farmers' strike would be conducted as a means of ending industrial strikes, Fackler said.

UNCURED VETS QUIT HOSPITALS TO SPREAD TB

Medical Director Deplores Lack Of Control Over Men's Departure

WASHINGTON, March 7—Hundreds of World War II veterans are leaving government tuberculosis hospitals uncured and are spreading the disease to others, it was learned today.

Dr. Paul R. Hawley, Veterans Administration Medical Director, said most veteran TB cases were caught early enough to effect a complete cure if the patients obeyed medical directions.

Many Leave Uncured

In many cases, however, they are walking out uncured and against direct medical advice, he said. Once out, they cannot return to the hospital for at least 90 days.

No TB patient can be kept in a veterans hospital against his will. Most recent records showed they were walking out at the rate of more than 14 a day, with results always serious and often fatal.

Hawley said the unauthorized departures—52 per cent of all World War II TB discharges in November—could be credited to these factors:

1. TB patients are naturally optimistic. They usually believe they are improving rapidly, and overestimate their strength.

2. Treatment they have gotten in VA hospitals in the past has not been the best. Cures have been lower than in other good TB hospitals.

Disability Pensions Cut

3. Disability pensions, for single men, are slashed to $20 on admission to a hospital. Outside, many TB victims are compensated for 100 per cent disability—$115 a month.

4. There is a tendency to think of pension rather than cure. Once he is well, the veteran's pension will be cut off. Some few acquire "pensionitis," don't want to be cured.

To correct the situation Hawley hopes to improve medical standards so every veteran can rest assured he is getting the best treatment available. He is also emphasizing educational measures.

BACKACHE, LEG PAINS MAY BE DANGER SIGN
Of Tired Kidneys

If backache and leg pains are making you miserable, don't just complain and do nothing about them. Nature may be warning you that your kidneys need attention.

The kidneys are Nature's chief way of taking excess acids and poisonous waste out of the blood. They help most people pass about 3 pints a day.

If the 15 miles of kidney tubes and filters don't work well, poisonous waste matter stays in the blood. These poisons may start nagging backaches, rheumatic pains, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness. Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning sometimes shows there is something wrong with your kidneys or bladder.

Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, a stimulant diuretic, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. Doan's give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from the blood. Get Doan's Pills.

OHIO UNIVERSITY TEACHES PILOTS HOW TO TEACH

ATHENS, Ohio, March 7—Having been the first college in the state to offer aviation flight training, Ohio University today has become "one of the few schools in the nation offering a flight instructor's course," President John C. Baker said.

"Ohio University now offers a course, which can be completed in one semester, making the student commercial pilot eligible to take a test for flight instructor," Dr. Baker explained.

With a total of 110 students, including 33 former Army and Navy pilots, Ohio University's aviation department is the largest in size in the state, Ralph N. Smeck, veteran university flying instructor and Civil Aeronautics Authority flight examiner, revealed.

Equiped with fifteen planes, a Link trainer and three hangers, the university owns its own airport and landing field with a 4000-foot runway located two miles east of the campus.

Scientist Urges Sharing Atom; Fears Arms Race

WASHINGTON, March 7—A single atomic bomb as destructive as 1,000,000 ten-ton blockbusters is now possible, according to Dr. Edward U. Condon, director of the National Bureau of Standards.

This would be 1,000 times more powerful than the bombs used against Japan and to be used in the forthcoming Navy tests.

And it also is possible, Condon believes, that other nations some day may turn out atom bombs bigger and better than ours.

Arms Race Condemned

For these reasons, Condon told the Science Talent Institute this country should work to avert an atomic armaments race.

Specifically, it should welcome Russian scientists "to our laboratories as they have welcomed ours to theirs, and extend the base of scientific cooperation with this great people."

Condon called for emancipation of science from military control, for dissipation of international distrust, and for "a united mankind using its intelligence cooperatively for the good of all."

The alternative to such cooperation, he said, is "a destructiveness thousands of times greater than ever before." Asserting that the missiles used on Hiroshima and Nagasaki were "old-fashioned, one hoss shay bombs," Condon added.

"Bombs 1,000 times more powerful than those already used are capable of being made in the near future.

Great Destruction Possible

"There are men living who know how to make a single bomb whose destructiveness is equal to 1,000,000 ten-ton blockbusters.

"One such bomb dropped on Washington or any other major city may be expected to wipe out its population, to destroy its buildings utterly, and to render the site uninhabitable due to poisoning by radioactive materials."

Condon said the United Nations Organization is the world's best hope of survival.

"Let us cooperate wholeheartedly with the other nations of the world," he added, "To agree to use atomic energy only for peaceful purposes and to set up an inspection system to enforce such agreement."

NEWS Behind the NEWS

the plain inner and outer facts today show me that I must prepare or be ready for what I do not want. These facts of today can be simply summarized in two conclusions:

A satisfactory way of dealing with Russia has not yet been found. Until it is found, we have no confidence in the peace.

Therefore, a reconsideration not only of foreign policy, but of related military and domestic tactics, would seem to be a primary order of pending government business.

BURLEY QUOTAS ARE CUT 10 PCT.

13 County Tobacco Growers Were Allotted Acreage Last Year

Individual farm acreage allotments for burley tobacco growers in Pickaway county will be reduced 10 per cent below 1945 in accordance with a national reduction ordered by the U. S. Department of Agriculture, Dewey Downs, County AAA committeeman, announced Thursday.

Thirteen farmers in the county were given acreage allotments last year, covering 17.2 acres, Mr. Downs reported. He said the county yield was high, averaging approximately 1,500 pounds to the acre or a crop valued at $600 per acre.

David and James Towell, Saltcreek township farmers, produced an outstanding crop in 1945. They reported a yield of 2,741 pounds on 1.7 acres, or a yield of 1,616 pounds per acre.

The reduction is considered advisable at this time in order to bring supplies of burley tobacco more nearly in line with demand.

"During the last two years available supplies of burley increased approximately 200,000,000 pounds because of the record crops of 1944 and 1945", Downs declared. "Many producers have experienced sharp price drops and favor a reduction to prevent accumulation of a tremendous surplus such as we saw several years ago".

52,000-Acre Reduction

The reduction will result in a total national acreage allotment of 558,000 acres, compared with allotments of 610,000 acres in 1945.

Most tobacco raised in Pickaway county is burley rather than the flue-cured variety which has a greater export value. Burley is used mostly on the domestic market, and only three to five per cent is exported.

THOUSANDS USE FULL 22 WEEKS OF JOBLESS PAY

Claims Load In Ohio Likely To Drop Soon, Says State Compensation Chief

COLUMBUS, O., March 7—Thousands of unemployed Ohioans already have exhausted the 22 weeks of benefits which they may draw in a year's time under the state unemployment compensation law, Charles H. Jones, administrator of the Ohio Bureau of Unemployment, said today.

The administrator said that in September and October 165,000 new claims were filed, marking the peak of the post-war new claim load in Ohio. Most of these claimants have since been returned to employment or have dropped out of the labor market and are no longer receiving unemployment compensation.

The thousands who remain unemployed, however, will have received the maximum of 22 weeks of payments in March and April.

During the first few days of March, between 1,500 and 2,000 final benefit checks were mailed daily by the Bureau to persons who have exhausted their benefit duration under the Ohio law. These persons cannot file another claim until a year's time has elapsed after the date of their original claim. The Ohio law provides that no person can draw more than 22 weeks of benefits within his "benefit year."

For example, if a person filed a valid new claim for a week of unemployment starting on September 23, 1945, he would first serve a two-weeks waiting period, required by the Ohio law, before he would become eligible for benefits. Assuming that he remained unemployed, he would then draw unemployment compensation for 22 weeks, which would carry him through the week of March 3, 1946. The earliest this claimant might again file a new claim under the Ohio law would be after his "benefit year" had elapsed on September 21, 1946.

An amendment enabling the Ohio Bureau to pay benefits up to a maximum of 22 weeks was passed by the Ohio legislature at a special session last September 5. Previously, the duration maximum in Ohio was 18 weeks. Although the new amendment also provided for a variable duration of benefits of from 18 to 22 weeks, 91 per cent of all persons qualifying for benefits during the last quarter of 1945 were eligible for 22 weeks, if they remained unemployed, Mr. Jones said.

COWLES LEAVES $155,000 TO 668 OF HIS EMPLOYES

DES MOINES, Ia., March 7—Gardner Cowles, Sr., publisher of the Des Moines Register and Tribune, left an estate estimated at slightly under $700,000, his will disclosed today.

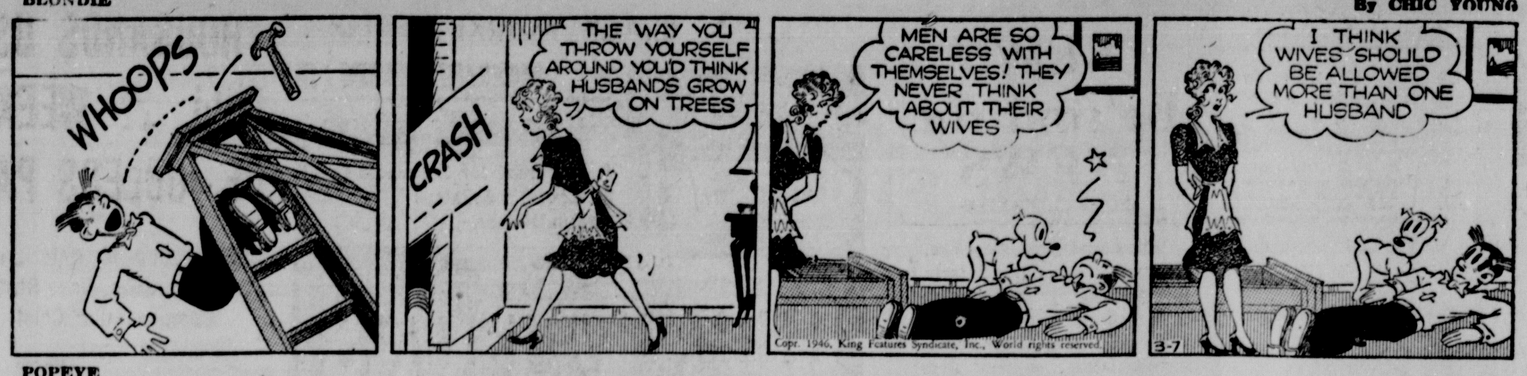

Cowles died Feb. 28 on his birthday after a lingering illness.

The will, as filed for probate, showed that the largest bequest was for cash payments totaling $155,000 to 668 employes of the Register and Tribune and radio station KRNT.

Employes with the company for 20 years or more will receive $500 each and those with the firm 15 to 20 years, $800 each. Other cash payments range from $200 to employes of 10 to 15 years length of service to $25 for those with the company more than three but less than five years.

Edgar Bergen forgot to bring Mortimer Snerd to rehearsal for the Charlie McCarthy show so held Charlie on his knee while he started to read Mortimer's lines, to which Charlie quipped, "Do you have to make that voice come out of me."

Seven-year-old Anne Whitfield gave producer Carlton E. Morse a number of tense moments during "His Honor the Barber" broadcast this week when she pulled out a front tooth in the middle of the show. However, the young trouper nonchalantly went on with her lines.

"Hey, commander," Bing yelled at Eddy Duchin during the Music Hall rehearsal last Thursday. Eddy swiftly turned, then laughingly remarked, "I did answer, didn't I, guess I haven't forgotten my Navy days yet."

The autographs of Abbott and Costello, Thursday comedy team, are now engraved on stone. Bud and Lou this week affixed their signatures in cement plaques which will be hung on the "Wall of Fame" section of Earl Carroll's famous Hollywood theatre.

There's no arguing with the logic of Uncle Sam's Army. When Phil Baker asked Herbert Blum of Yonkers, N. Y., a "Take It Or Leave It" contestant, to name the mother of Abraham Lincoln, the soldier promptly replied: "Mrs. Lincoln." It was good enough for Baker, even though he had expected the answer, "Nancy Hanks."

SCOTT'S SCRAP BOOK

By E. J. SCOTT

ARTIE AUERBACH

"Pickle in the needle
With the mustard on top,
Just the way you like them
And they're all red hot".

That's the plaintive cry of the frankfurter salesman on the Jack Benny program, a rib-tickling ditty in dialect by an ex-newspaper photographer turned radio comic.

He's Artie Auerbach, a veteran of 14 years in show business who once was one of New York's top news cameramen. Artie's transition from photographer to comedian came about through a natural bent for dialect plus editorial assignments to photograph various celebrities in radio and stage work. A well-known comedian who posed for Auerbach finally induced him to accept a job as his radio stooge. Artie soon became famous as "Kitzel" on the Al Pearce show and as "Schneider" on the Rise of the Goldbergs.

Auerbach spent a great part of the war years with USO camp shows both in this country and abroad. Shortly after his return Jack Benny heard his hot dog salesman routine and offered him a spot on the Benny program.

Artie, a native New Yorker who is a frustrated cowboy at heart, lives in San Fernando Valley and owns two horses and a western outfit. He is still an expert photographer, but doesn't have much time for the camera now. He's too busy selling hot dogs.

$550,000 Bond Issue Voted To Buy City Water Plant

Ordinance Is Passed, 6 To 1; Only Dissenting Ballot Cast By Horn

Passage of an ordinance by city council Wednesday night authorizing the issuance of $550,000 municipal bonds had brought one step nearer to realization Thursday the dream of city-owned water system in Circleville.

With only one dissenting vote the ordinance, enacted as an emergency measure, provides for the purchase of the property of the Ohio Water Service Co. and for improvement and expansion of the water system.

Horn Is Lone Dissenter

The action was taken during a lengthy adjourned session Wednesday night. The meeting had been continued from Tuesday night because the draft of the ordinance had not then been completed by Attorneys Joseph W. Adkins, Jr., and Thomas Renick, special counsel for the city in negotiations to buy the water system.

The lone dissenting vote was cast by Councilman Boyd Horn, Fourth Ward. Just preceding the roll-call, in voicing his opposition to the legislation, Councilman Horn declared:

"I am against selling $90,000 in bonds for water softening equipment and I am also opposed to giving an exclusive contract for the sale of $550,000 in bonds to Stifel, Nicolaus and Co., of Chicago. There is something rotten in Denmark."

Bill Is Voted, 6 To 1

Following Councilman Horn's declaration Councilman Ray Cook, Second Ward, and Councilman-at-large William M. Reid, spoke in favor of passage of the ordinance. On the roll-call the legislation was passed by a 6 to 1 vote.

When the council session began the members by unanimous vote passed as an emergency measure an amendment to the 1946 appropriation ordinance authorizing the expenditure of $286 for a coin-counting machine.

Consideration of the $550,000 bond ordinance then got under way. It consisted of 45 typewritten pages and embraced 19 sections. The document was presented to the council by Attorneys Adkins and Renick.

During the reading of the ordinance the council went into executive session, and discussed at considerable length the various aspects of the water-system-buying project and several of the most vital sections of the ordinance.

Interest 2¼ Per Cent

Major stipulations of the ordinance:

1. The $550,000 in bonds will be issued in $1,000 denomination with interest rate of not to exceed two and three-fourths per cent per annum.

2. The bonds will be known as mortgage revenue bonds and will be a first lien on the properties comprising the water system.

3. They will be 30-year bonds with $12,000 of the total amount maturing in 1948 and a gradually increasing quantity maturing annually thereafter until 1977 in which year the final maturing sum will be $26,000.

4. Plans call for issuance of the bonds as of July 1, 1946.

5. Interest coupons attached to the bonds will be payable as of April 1 and Oct. 1 each year.

6. Sale of the bonds will be administered by the firm of Stifel, Nicolaus and Co., Chicago, Ill.

$460,000 Issue First Step

7. Bonds totaling $460,000 will be sold to defray the costs of purchasing the water system from the Ohio Water Service Co. The remaining $90,000 will be issued later, probably within 12 months, to finance improvements, particularly water softening equipment.

Other angles of the water project, disclosed during the discussion, are:

The maximum cost of operating the softening plant is estimated at $5,000 a year. No increase in water rates will be necessary.

$90,000 Of Issue To Be Used To Install Municipal Softening System

While the ordinance stipulates an interest rate of not to exceed two and three-fourths per cent a year it is possible the interest rate will be lower.

Under the law, the Ohio Water Service Co. has the right to ask for a special referendum of the voters at the polls on the question of purchasing the water system. The company is allowed 30 days after enactment of the bond ordinance to file such application.

August 14 Is Deadline

Aug. 14 is the deadline fixed by the court for the municipality to buy the water system.

In the event the purchase project should fall through the city would stand to lose $35,000 to $40,000 in engineering and legal fees, court costs, and other expenses.

It is the generally accepted practice in buying a public utility for a municipality to enter into a bond sale contract with one bond concern.

In negotiations heretofore the Ohio Water Service Co. asked a price of $650,000 for the properties but the value as fixed by the court is $450,000. Expenses incidental to the purchase are covered in the additional $10,000 in bonds which council has authorized.

Columbus Bank Is Trustee

Huntington National Bank, of Columbus, has agreed to act as trustee and registrar for the bonds and also to act as transfer agent and to handle coupon returns. It was pointed out that Ohio's banking regulations will not permit any Circleville bank to serve the city in this capacity.

After taking over the system the rates to be fixed by the city are to be sufficient to pay all operating costs, repairs, maintenance, taxes, and to set up a sinking fund to provide for payment of interest and for retirement of the bonds.
